

Resolve to Live Intentionally in 2025

Year end is a good time to take a self-inventory of how your life progressed over the past year and to plan what you'd like to accomplish in the coming year. How did your resolutions fare in 2024? What went better or worse than you planned? That's a good place to start. And here's a challenge: Consider that one quarter of the 21st century is in our rear-view mirror. What are your plans for the next quarter century? While it might sound daunting to think so far ahead, having a life plan is important so that we can live with purpose and intent. In the hubbub of day-to-day living, we're often operating on auto pilot. It's important to have guideposts to keep us headed in the right direction. That's essentially what people mean when they talk about "living intentionally." It's simply a way to consciously and mindfully live our lives in alignment with our core values, beliefs, and goals.

As you plan for the year ahead, why not establish your intentions rather than make resolutions? The reframing of "intentions" puts emphasis on the positive, on the process, and on the long-term, while resolutions are often short-term, concrete steps.

Research shows that most resolutions are abandoned within a month or two, which can start the year with a feeling of failure. Instead, make one simple resolution for 2025: To live more intentionally.

Here are some ideas for living more intentionally in the year ahead and ways your MAP can help:
