Prioritize Your Mental Well-Being in May!

May is Mental Health Awareness Month, a reminder that your mental well-being is as important as your physical health. Stress, anxiety, family demands, and work pressures can add up, affecting how we think, feel, and perform. Taking care of your mental well-being starts with simple, intentional actions. Make time to rest and recharge, stay connected with supportive people, and don't ignore signs of burnout. Even small steps like practicing mindfulness, setting boundaries, or taking regular breaks can have a meaningful impact. It's also important to remember that you don't have to handle challenges alone. Reaching out for support is a sign of strength, not weakness. Whether you're dealing with everyday stress or more complex concerns, talking to someone can help you gain perspective and develop effective coping strategies. Your MAP is here to help, confidentially and at no cost to you. You and your family members can get the support you need when you need it:

Remember – if you or a loved one face crises or need immediate help, call, text, or chat 988 for the Suicide & Crisis Lifeline. This 3-digit number offers a quick way to access free, confidential support for those who are in a suicidal crisis or mental health-related distress 24/7 across the U.S. and Canada.

Move More, Feel Better

May is both Physical Fitness and Sports Month and National Bike Month, great reasons to get moving. Physical activity doesn't just improve strength and stamina, it also boosts mood, reduces stress, and supports better sleep. Start by finding activities you enjoy. Walking, biking, gardening, or playing a sport with family or friends all count. Even short 10-minute breaks during the day can help you recharge.
